

Chaiti Ghosal

Chaiti Ghoshal is an actress who has worked in Bengali movies and television. She was born in a Bengali family in West Bengal and is the daughter of the famous Bengali actor Shyamal Ghoshal. She is the former student of Gokhale Memorial Girls' College. She has worked in movies like Paroma (1984) featuring Rakhee Gulzar and directed by Aparna Sen, Tomar Rakte Aamaar Sohaag (1993), Atmiyoswajan (1999), Abar Aranyo- (2003) which also had Sharmila Tagore, Soumitra Chatterjee and Tabu, Prohor (2004), Amu (2005) where she starred with Konkona Sen Sharma, Chittagong (2012) which was a historical war movie also starring Manoj Bajpai, Na Hannayte (2012), Biye Notout (2013) also starring Rituparna Sengupta and Tota Roy Choudhary. She also starred in Ek Je Aachhe Shahor (2014) which was not released. She has also done television shows like serials like Ek Akasher Neeche, which was very popular, Protibimbo, Antarale and recently Tomay Amay Mile, which airs on Star Jalsa. She was doing theatre when Aparna Sen cast her in movie Paroma in 1984. The movie received huge critical acclamation. She is married to director Ranajit Ray, who cast her in Chena Athena where they met. This show also won her many accolades. She was career oriented, but her personal life took a new direction when her son was born in the year 1995. She was working in Mumbai, which she gave up and settled in Calcutta. She has returned to the theatre which proved to be a turning point in her life. She has played the lead role of Nandini, in Gautam Halder's production of Rabindra nath Tagore's work "Raktakarabi" since 2010.

She won the best actress award for this role at the "Zee Banglar Gaurav Samman" in the theatre category. She has been exploring new areas and also anchored a TV documentary on Indian cricketer and former captain Saurav Ganguly. The documentary was called The Warrior Prince. She also worked in Gautam Halder's movie, Mukti.